Divine Touch of China

Tui Na “push grasp” is an acupressure, oriental bodywork therapy that has been used in Chinese culture for over 2,000 years. It is one of the oldest forms of healing in the world. A task-focused technique targeted towards healing and reducing pain, it seeks to establish a more harmonious energy flow throughout the body, allowing the body to heal itself naturally. With relaxing hand massage techniques, it promotes the revival of the soul and body with alternating kneading, chopping, and stretching motion. It is finished with a Chinese foot reflexology involving massage and applying pressure to the reflex areas of the foot. It induces a regulating action on the corresponding body organ and results in the release of energy. It is very relaxing, especially for those who stand on their feet all day or just have tired, achy feet. It is an effective way of relieving tension and contributes to a feeling of wellbeing.

Benefits:

- Relieves anxiety, tension and improves sleep.
- Improves metabolism and relaxes muscles.

Divine Touch of Tibet

Tibetan massage has been practiced for thousands of years in Tibet and the Himalayan region. It is one of the oldest forms of massage found on earth. The Tibetan “Ku Nye” translates “applying oil on the body” (Ku) and “massaging the body” (Nye). It creates harmony between the body and mind, promoting health and wellbeing by stimulating the energy points and channels within the body. Starting with drenching the body in butter or oil, massaging slow and gentle, working up to more vigorous action and deeper work on key muscles and specific points. Sweet scented Zathi-Dukpa herbal bags prepared from nutmeg, caraway and sesame oil are placed on different parts of the trunk, arms, legs and feet while the therapist’s hands work consistently, rubbing, kneading and stroking with deep circular motions to acupressure points. While the magic of herbal infused bags is working, comforting smooth flat hot stones are placed on key points on the body, heat relaxes the muscles and promotes temperature balance making this an excellent healing method. In the end, scrub of dry chickpea flour used to open the pores absorbs excess oil, leaving just the right amount in the skin. Your skin feels hydrated, nourished and radiant.

Benefits:

- Cures menstrual disorders, headaches, constipation and lumbar pain.
- Improves sleep, metabolism, mood, and appetite.
- Boosts vitality and immune system.
- Relieves tension and helps to fluidify the energy, lymphatic, and energetic circulation.

Ayurveda, an ancient system of life “ayur” and knowledge “veda” believes that life is a combination of body, mind, senses, and spirit working on your supreme consciousness. Ayurveda focuses on balancing the body’s three main constitutional forces: the energy of movement “vata”, the energy of digestion “pitta” and the energy of structure “kapha”, to improve health and create harmony in life. In Ayurveda, Abhyanga means “anointing”, based on balancing the doshas and the technique starts with vigorous massage on the specific energy points “chakras” with large quantities of warm oils and spices to remove toxins from the system, restoring balance to the body, soothing tensed and strained muscles. Shirodhara works on the head and promotes tremendous relaxation by pouring a warm herbal ayurvedic oil on the forehead from a specific height, for a specific time period in a continuous stream, allowing the oil to run through the scalp and down into the hair, finishing it with combining a scalp and head massage to give a deep sense of inner peace.
